Dear Residents,

I appreciate the story ideas and input readers send me at bkula@bestversionmedia.com and encourage you to share with me information about local charitable organizations and people helping to make Plano a great place to live, work and play.

If you have an interesting story or family that you think should be featured, please reach out to me.

I'm keenly interested in writing about people and topics that impact Willow Bend Neighbors' core readership base that's defined by Spring Creek Parkway to the north, Plano Parkway to the south, the Dallas North Tollway to the west and Preston Road to the east but cover areas just west of the Tollway too.

Modern Day Saints

In this edition, the family you'll read about happens to be one whom I've gotten to know in recent years in West Plano.

Pam and Clive Fernando are modern day saints in my eyes.

They care so much about giving back to their community and society. They don't do it for a pat on the back, but purely out of gratitude for the opportunities they have been giving after having moved to the United States from England.

Prior to working in England, the two were born in Sri Lanka where they met as teenagers.

After 40 years of marriage, the retired couple works hard in so many volunteer roles that you wonder where they get such energy to devote themselves so fully to others.

But that's the beauty of their story.

Despite dedicating so much of their time to help those in need, they find strength in the blessings that materialize from their many charitable organization projects that span the globe.

I hope that by reading about their missionary, mentoring and sweat equity projects you'll be motivated to find a cause to support in such fashion.

Messenger Of Mercy

On a personal note, I often see Pam walking in our neighborhood, or just sitting adjacent to a nearby pond that is home to two adult swans for which I'm caretaker.

Just the sight of Pam near the pond lets me know that someone is joyfully admiring beauty in nature.

Most often, Pam is either singing or praying to express her appreciation for the grace of the birds that she says reinforces God's majesty.

To be around Pam is by itself a grace, and it's a spirit that Clive and she have passed on to their adult children and extended family.

When I was recovering from Covid-19 pneumonia, while my wife and youngest child were recuperating from lesser versions of the evil virus in the spring, Pam was one of the messengers of mercy who delivered an amazing meal to us.

Not only did I love the food (best ginger soup ever!) she prepared, but her loving and supportive comments were the perfect medicine to help with the recovery.

If you're a seasoned Planoite, you've met good people like Pam and Clive.

And if you're new to the area, the story of the Fernandos will reinforce why so many will tell you that our number one attribute in Plano is our kind-hearted citizens.

Have an outstanding October.

Spread joy,
Bill Kula

FULFILLING A LIFE OF SERVICE

By Bill Kula | Photos by Chloe Saltarelli

The resident feature is proudly sponsored by Edward Jones

With a spirit of gratitude, Pam and Clive Fernando serve tirelessly to make their community, country and world a better place.

For the native Sri Lankans and proud Americans, it's vital they say to use their gifts and talents to help others in need. And they do so without seeking anything in return.

“As immigrants, we always felt it was imperative to take advantage of the many opportunities provided in American society,” said Pam. “In other words, work hard, earn your way and achieve your goals.”

For the couple who celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary in May, they find their greatest joy when serving others.

And it's a life approach that they work to instill in their two adult sons and extended family in word and deed.

Faithful Servant

For more than 10 years, Pam taught Sunday School and vacation Bible school at Christ Church Plano.

At her church, she has also led small groups and Bible studies class for 20 years and serves as a Eucharistic minister in service to homebound members.

With a deep faith and passion to help others, she began doing mission work in 2007 to Peru where she worked at multiple orphanages.

Soon thereafter, she started participating in missions in Guatemala with husband Clive for several years. In Guatemala, the two were part of a team that helped build energy efficient stoves to eliminate the smoke inhalation and burns within the Mayan villages.

Atop her ministry work, she felt called to become trained and inducted into the Order of Saint Luke's (OSL) and www.OSLToday.org, a worldwide ministry that offers healing and prayer support.

In 2013, Pam concentrated her time on medical/prayer and healing missions in India and expanded her work to people in Honduras with a focus on prisons, including maximum security prisons with MS-13 and MS-18 gang members.

“The purpose of the work in Honduras was to give them hope and a future with peace,” says Pam who continued her journey with the medical/prayer/prison mission ministry until Covid-19 shut down international travels. “Several of those incarcerated have accepted Christ and started their own ministry to reach out to others to make a difference in their community.”

In 2017, Pam felt called to dedicate her life to further serving others and dissolved her business to be fully available to serve the needy. At the same time, she also felt called to equip a new OSL chapter in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. And in 2018, Pam offered women's conferences to more than 1,000 women in Uganda.

Mentor To Others

For 25 years, Clive has served as an usher at Christ Church Plano.

In addition, he has volunteered his time to @BPeace, a government funded organization that aids minority and women owned companies in developing their businesses since early 2021.

He enjoys participating in the weekly men's group at Christ Church Plano to grow in his faith and share his experiences with others.

During his mission work in the field in Peru and Guatemala, Clive enjoyed helping the less fortunate farming community in the hill country by building energy efficient stoves. Clive participated in the Guatemala mission every year from 2006 until the pandemic .

For several years Clive and Pam guided and coached gifted children in the Plano Independent School District for its “Destination Imagination and Odyssey of the Mind” program, winning many awards.

Clive still continues his ‘college time’ hobby of building and constructing electronic gadgets of every type.

After retirement, Clive spends most of the time these days with his new hobby of photography. He has taken images of nature and wildlife and has won several amateur awards as a member of both the Plano Photography Club and the Heard Museum Nature Photography club.

Finding Peace In Nature

Given her deep passion for service, Pam also enjoys being an active supporter of the Humane Society in support of her affinity for the protection and care of animals.

That characteristic plays out in her daily neighborhood walks as she enjoys talking to birds and swans while she admires local gardens and sweeping fields of grass.

“The innocence and precious joy of our neighborhood swans gives me inner joy and peace,” she said. “I receive tremendous joy in making a difference in the environment as God’s creation, by picking up and carrying neighborhood plastics, glass and aluminum or anything that is harmful including plastic bags of dog poop left behind by people, to a recycle bin.”

She also enjoys supporting The Voice of Martyrs, which is an organization that works to protect persecuted Christians throughout the world. In addition, she has a special touch with the less fortunate children by supporting Doctors Without Borders who perform free surgeries in third world countries.

She and Clive both support the Wounded Warriors organization in honor of their American citizenship and the opportunities their move to America have provided.

The dynamic duo also supports several Right to Life organizations and several groups that meet the needs of the homeless, the stranded and the abandoned.

The Early Days To Proud Parenthood

While still living in Sri Lanka, Clive was a good friend of Pam’s brother that led to their courtship. As a teenager, Clive often visited the house to tutor Pam’s siblings in math and science.

Once Clive graduated from college and accepted his first job, the two married and are now the proud parents of two adult children and seven grandchildren.

Their oldest son, Avin, enrolled at the University of Texas at Dallas at the age of 12, and became a full-time student at age 13 at the University of North Texas. Upon graduation, Avin continued his education at Carnegie Mellon University prior to meeting and marrying his wife, Emily, in Pennsylvania.

Today, Avin and Emily are homeschooling their seven children and are fully dedicated to bringing them up as responsible adults.

Avin actively contributes to his local church as the Junior Warden. For most of his life, he has played the piano and violin and sang in many church choirs.

Reflective of the family’s dedication to service, their oldest daughter, Bethel, 15, has participated in missions with Pam in Honduras since 2017. During the missions, she has helped with crafts, assisted children in the long lines who come to the medical clinics, and has taught vacation bible school.

Clive and Pam’s youngest son, Adrian, resides in the Dallas area.

He has followed in his parent’s footsteps by pursuing a life of community service. He has been involved in missions in China, participated in several Bible groups and volunteers his time to help people in need.

Aging Gracefully With Purpose

With a family mindset of earning your living, the Fernandos have strived to demonstrate hard work, tenacity and determination to achieve their dreams.

“We seek to maintain a healthy lifestyle to enjoy life at its fullest and age gracefully with peace and joy,” said Clive who looks back on his professional career with pride.

In 1987, he began working for Ericsson, a worldwide leading Mobile Communication Infrastructure provider of HW and SW technology to service providers, in England. Excelled in SW design and Management, two years later, the family moved to Plano for a new role at Ericsson where he worked until retirement as a Senior Project Manager in 2019.

In college, he received a bachelor’s degree in Electrical Engineering that guided his career in Communications SW design and Management which ended up with Technical Project Management.

With a background in accounting and computer sciences, Pam served as a comptroller and chief financial officer for a North Texas company for several years before dedicating her role to raising their two sons.

When their first grandchild was born, Pam felt called to leave the corporate world and formed an accounting consulting company so she could be more available to her growing family.

She’s the published co-author of a book, The God Who Whispers, that has been described as a delightful collection of personal encounters with God in nature and through relationships.

At home, Pam and Clive enjoy spending time with their two cats, Missy, 13, and Feles, 8 years and Sophie, a one-year-old German Shepherd, and queen of the house where she keeps the cats on their toes.

The Best Time for Roof Washing is Coming Soon!

By Kim Harrington

Another example of a roof before and after cleaning.

The best time for roof washing is at the start of fall and before winter. Soft washing is the best solution for cleaning all roof styles, such as asphalt shingles, terra cotta, slate, stone, and metal.

Roof washing benefits are:

- Preventative Care
- Extend Longevity
- Restore Natural Appearance
- Lower Energy Cost

What are common problems found on roofs?

In Texas, the most popular roof style is asphalt shingles due to the economical pricing. However, competitive pricing means manufacturers use fillers such as wood chips and cardboard. Due to these fillers, 80% of shingled roofs will develop moss, mold, and fungus growth problems. These organisms will deteriorate your roof, which can result in water damage when left unaddressed.

Another common problem on roofs is rust and corrosion caused by iron in metal and some natural stones. It is unsightly but can also spread and cause decay.

What is soft washing? Why can't I pressure wash?

Soft washing is the alternative to pressure washing using water-based, biodegradable solutions that emulsify dirt and grime. Soft washing dissolves cobwebs and kills mold, bacteria, and algae while sanitizing the surfaces cleaned. It uses one-third the water of pressure washing and lasts four to six times longer. Pressure washing can damage many roof surfaces and cause more problems.

So, what's the process?

Soft washing uses low pressure and a high-water flow with added cleaning agents and surfactants. Rather than using a pressure washer that may clean but not kill algae, low-pressure pumps are used to spray cleaning solutions. They are allowed a dwell time to activate and then are rinsed thoroughly.

Are my plants affected?

Possibly. However, reputable companies will take precautions to help prevent this by watering before, during, and after the process. When the work is complete, a plant wash solution is applied that contains gypsum. Gypsum neutralizes the effects of sodium hypochlorite and gives the plants nutrients. Covering plants creates a greenhouse effect, so this solution is an option in ideal circumstances only. If plants are directly in the roof's drip line where no rain gutters are present, these are the most likely to defoliate or turn brown. This condition, though unsightly, is most often temporary. 90% of the affected plants usually recover within 90 days. Professionals will cover the replacement cost if necessary if plants do not return to life after this recovery period.

Is it safe to clean my roof?

Soft washing is the safest solution. Professionals will dilute, divert, and decontaminate any runoff from the roof. Normally everything can be reached from the edge of the roof. However, walking the roof to access hard-to-reach areas like a chimney may be necessary. In this case, make sure whom you hire has safety harnesses, ropes, and lanyards to reduce your liability. Though not required in Texas, worker's comp further protects you from a home insurance claim if someone is injured on your property.

An example of rust removal improvements.

PARENTING WITH PERSPECTIVE

Author Helps Parents Gain New Insights With Humor & Hope

By Elizabeth Lenart

Rev. Kim Meyers, family ministry and community outreach pastor at St. Andrew United Methodist Church; mother of two teenage boys, host of “Lift: A Parenting Podcast,” and a seasoned teacher of parenting classes, has released her first book, titled Parenting with Perspective.

The book is a unique parenting resource she always wished she had, says Rev. Meyers. With humor and hope, this book gives parents rearing children of any age a new companion on the journey through parenthood.

“There are already plenty of parenting style books on the shelves,” says Rev. Meyers. “Parenting with Perspective is like a friend you can go to in the middle of the night. You will mess up, but it’s important to give yourself grace and move forward. Parenting during COVID-19 has created tremendous pressure on families, but if we can parent with perspective, it makes a huge difference. And, it’s okay to not like your children some days. We’ve all been there. This book talks about things parents experience that other books do not.”

The first part of the book focuses on the parent, not the child; the second part focuses on who the child is, not whom the parent wants them to be; and the final part focuses on how the parent and child work together. Each chapter begins with a Bible verse, includes a perspective piece written by others in the community, and ends with a prayer.

“By providing the wisdom of other experts such as retired teachers and counselors, the book gives yet another helpful point of view,” adds Meyers. “Parenting is hard, and it is my hope to help parents take a breath, step back and gain new perspective, and then move on! It’s also important for parents to take care of themselves.”

Rev. Meyers spent each Friday of the pandemic working on her book and was surprised at how easily the book came together.

“I have thought about writing a book for a long time, and I have no doubt that the Holy Spirit had a hand in my ability to do so – every step of the way,” adds Meyers. “Many don’t know that I’m dyslexic, which presents some challenges – especially when writing a book! I have such a strong desire to help families be the best they can be, and I pray this resource will help parents know they are good enough and to keep fighting the fight!”

In 2019, Rev. Meyers launched “Lift: A Parenting Podcast” to help parents navigate the challenges of raising children of all ages in today’s world. LIFT podcasts have tackled many additional timely, tough subjects including mass shootings, grief and suicide, the challenges of COVID-19, and race, featuring community leaders, church members and other experts as guests. It is available for free on <https://liftparentingpodcast.buzzsprout.com/>. Meyers also enjoys speaking to groups on parenting and is developing a Bible study companion to the book that can be used in small groups. Visit www.kimmeyers.org for more information.

Parenting with Perspective will be available October 1, from $17.99 to $22.99. To pre-order, visit <https://store.inviteresources.com/product/parenting-with-perspective>.

The community is invited to attend a special “Parenting with Perspective” workshop featuring Rev. Kim Meyers on October 17, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. in Smith Worship Center at St. Andrew United Methodist Church, 5801 W. Plano Parkway. There is no cost to attend. Plano Fire Training Center Set to Have One of First FARS Technology in Area

By Captain Peggy Harrell
Photos Plano Fire Department

Ground was broken on Plano’s Fire Training Center last October and work is progressing nicely. Plano Fire-Rescue is proud to announce that the Fire Training Center will be built with a Firefighter Air Replenishment System (FARS), and will be one of the first fire training centers in the area to be equipped with this technology.

FARS are standpipes delivering breathing air, providing firefighters with a quick, safe, and effective means to refill their air bottles at filling stations located throughout a building. During emergency operations, having the ability to replenish air bottles within a building, and not have to leave the building to do so outside, saves time and energy that can be better spent in firefighting efforts. Basically, FARS deliver air replenishment when and where firefighters need air the most.

Plano was the first city in Texas to install FARS in new high-rise construction and approximately 25 high-rise buildings in Plano built since 2016 have FARS. Plano’s new Fire Training Center is one of the first in the area to be built with FARS. Being able to train on the system will better prepare Plano’s firefighters in the use of the systems in place.

The fully operational FARS has been provided to Plano Fire-Rescue for the new Fire Training Center at no cost by the Firefighter Air Coalition, an advocacy group dedicated to promoting firefighter safety through the use of air management best practices, advanced fireground research, and the adoption of codes requiring FARS.

“FARS is a game changer for the safety of firefighters and therefore, by extension, the general public. Water and air are the two biggest commodities that firefighters need to fight fire,” said Sam Greif, Plano Fire Chief. “The water issue was solved decades ago with standpipe systems. Now the air issue is resolved with FARS.”
